Licensing

Section 1

General Software Licensing Information

All Sun's software products are subject to the terms and conditions of Sun's End User Object Code License, unless otherwise indicated for a particular product. Customers not willing to comply with those terms and customers who do not have agreements with Sun modifying those terms are not authorized to use Sun's software products.

The End User Object Code License provides that the licensed software may be used by the number of users for which the corresponding licensing fee has been paid. Licensing coverage for each product is defined with the ordering information and product descriptions found with each product. A license cannot be shared between two separate companies. Licenses cannot be transferred without authorization from Sun. Following is an overview of the types of licensing governing Sun's software products.

Software enhancements price is for each license, unless noted otherwise.

Types of Licensing

Number of "Uses" Licensed

Products licensed in this manner allow the sharing of software up to a maximum limit determined by the number of "uses" licensed. Examples of types of uses licensed are user, sessions, clients, and gateways. The "uses" may be bound by limitations such as a network, building, or site. Any limitations will be described in the ordering notes found with each product.

Licensed for a Specific System, Board, Printer, or SBus Card

In this situation, the software can be used on only one "designated" system, board, printer, or SBus card. Once equipment is designated, the customer needs authorization from Sun to transfer a license to other equipment.

Geographic Limitations

This type of licensing allows extensive usage of the software within a specified geographic area. The most common geographic limitation is a Site License.
A Site License authorizes the use of the licensed software and its associated documentation on a maximum of 500 systems at a customer site. A site is defined as a building or building complex within a one-half (1/2) mile radius of the "Ship To Address" specified on the Purchase Acknowledgment of the order for the licensed software. In certain cases, Sun may grant exceptions to the standard definition of a site, provided that all requests are submitted to Sun in writing. Sun shall make the final determination of what defines a "site."

Default Marketing Parts

When no release is specified, the product shipped will be licensed with the latest release level available at the time of shipment.

Solaris Licensing Information

A copy of the Solaris Binary Code License is shipped with all Sun system board products. Customers are authorized to use Solaris only if they are able to abide by the terms of this license of have another Solaris licensing agreement in place with Sun.

All Sun system and system board products include a Solaris license. The type of Solaris license(s) shipped with each platform reflects the way in which that system is most commonly used. Additional Solaris licenses are available to allow increased usage of the software.

The two license classes for any Solaris release are Desktop and Server. The following sections define Desktop and Server Licenses, denote the Solaris license(s) that ships with each Sun system or system board, and discuss optional Solaris licenses available to expand the usage of the software.

When a system or system board is licensed for Solaris 1.x and an upgrade to Solaris 2.x, either of these releases may be run on that system or board without incurring additional licensing fees.

The Solaris license is not transferred when the system or system board is resold without authorization from Sun.

The date of shipment of the system or board determines the Solaris release levels for which it is licensed.

Definition of a Solaris Server

A Solaris server license is required if the system will be used in any of the following ways:

- Primary use as any type of server other than print or NIS server
- Exports more file systems than it imports
- Provides swap disk space for any other system
- Provides home directory space for any other system
- Provides boot binaries for any other system
- Provides compute services for more than two continuous users (distinct user IDs)
- Provides database service for more than two continuous users
- Allows more than two users to be directly connected
- Allows more than two continuous, network-based users to be connected (e.g. rlogin, telnet, xhost, or Xterm)

Intermittent connections by more than two users do not require a server license.

Solaris Desktop License

A system that does not provide any of the services that require a Solaris Server License qualifies for a Solaris Desktop License. Only one type of Solaris Desktop License is required, regardless of the number of processors on that system.

Solaris Server License

A Solaris Server License provides unlimited usage of the system.

Upgrading a Solaris Desktop License to a Solaris Server License

If a system that shipped with a Solaris Desktop License will be used as a server, the system must be upgraded to a Solaris server license. Refer to the "Solaris Version Upgrades" or the "Solaris Subscriptions" in Section 2 for ordering information.
